Dear Red:

I recently have visited the [REDACTED] I wish you to know that I am delighted with it. It is an ideal place for the use we intend to make of it. With the freedom this gives us to add, as a regular feature in language training, the "living language" exercise that has been demonstrated to be our most valuable single exercise, we can advance one more step in our effort to develop language training that surpasses in quality and in economy of invested employee time in relation to results all other language training in the country.

I feel that you are personally responsible for making this possible, and we all wish you to be aware of our appreciation for this opportunity you have given us to develop superior training. I personally hope that you will visit "the country school" after we begin our activities about the first of August, or whenever before then the place is ready for use. From then on, we hope to have a fairly continuous program of activities at the school.

Sincerely,
